

RBC Administrator a Building Industry Leader as NASCLA President

One area Baumberger wants to focus on is recruitment of young people into the trades workforce. There has been a decline over the past several years in the number of young people entering the workforce, causing great concern about the future of the industry.

“NASCLA is working with several groups on outreach and educational programs to rebuild our construction industry workforce,” Baumberger said. “And I am excited to be a part of that.”

Janet’s supervisor, Dean Grigg, is proud of the work Janet does in the state and across the nation.

“This is an honor for Janet, for the Residential Builders Commission, and for the State of South Carolina,” said Grigg, Deputy Director for the Professional and Occupational Licensing Division. “This puts South Carolina at the forefront of the building industry, and I look forward to all that Janet will accomplish in the next year.”
